

Leading Remote Teams

Productivity & wellbeing when you can't see your people

Participants Maximum 20 people

Format 2 hour Interactive Live Virtual Webinar

Results This interactive webinar will help managers with how to lead a high performing team when the focus shifts to remote working. We provide a vision for how working remotely can actually be an improvement on being 'stuck in an office' and deal with the practical ways to create the right culture for productivity and wellbeing - even when you don't control the physical environment.

Key Benefits

- ▶ Learn why culture matters more – not less – when people work from home.
- ▶ Ideas to (re)create the social rituals and interactions that help bind and motivate high-performing teams and promote staff wellbeing
- ▶ The benefits of communications manifestos (& how to create one for your team)
- ▶ How to lead and look after people through periods of change or uncertainty
- ▶ How to be agile and resilient when plans and circumstances change quickly
- ▶ How to identify and act upon the opportunities that remote-working brings, as well as how to deal with the threats.

Making it Stick

- ▶ eCopy of Graham Allcott's bestselling book
- ▶ PDF takeaway for all participants as a reminder of the key points
- ▶ Access to The Productivity Ninja Academy

Overview

"Working from home" has always been viewed with suspicion. But organisations like BaseCamp, the Wikimedia Foundation, the United Nations Development Programme and indeed Think Productive have operated almost exclusively remotely for years – and see remote working as a flexible, agile competitive advantage.

So how do you have watercooler moments when there's no watercooler, or meet back at base when there isn't a base? How do you create the culture for high-performance, and make sure no one is making pasta when they should be paying attention on the team conference call?

Delivered by one of our expert 'Productivity Ninjas' (all of whom work predominantly remotely), this 90-minute interactive webinar looks at strategic perspectives as well as practical tools and take-aways, helping you lead a productive, agile, happy and informed remote team.
